

Clean Energy Event, A Joint Meeting with NAEM and CMBEN

Thursday, Sept. 10, 2013

Bram Claeys Biography

Bram Claeys is the Deputy Director, Renewables Division at the Massachusetts Department of Energy Resources.

He is responsible for policy development, focusing on renewable heating and cooling. He serves on the management team coordinating the Clean Energy Results Program and leads the Electricity Working Group of the Clean Energy & Climate Plan.

Bram Claeys has 14 years of experience in energy and climate policy, previously working in Belgium, and the European Union. He holds a Masters degree in Organic Chemistry from the University of Ghent, Belgium as well as degrees in Development Cooperation and Environmental Science & Technology.