

gensuite is determined to help women succeed

In an industry where women are underrepresented, Gensuite strives to nurture a work environment that empowers, advances and connects women in the software industry. At Gensuite, your voice is heard, regardless of gender, race, or religious preference; where your identity is not only accepted, but celebrated. At the end of the day, Gensuite is a place where men and women work together to help our customers get the job done: to enable workers to return home safely everyday and to protect the precious environment we live in. Gensuite's women initiatives reflect this commitment to help women in tech succeed.

A Place Where Women Rise

For women who work at Gensuite, the possibilities are endless. In the United States alone, 84% of Gensuite's corporate team is comprised of women. It is a company where women are lifted up and encouraged to advance in their positions through careful guidance from senior leaders and ample opportunities.

A Place Where Women Lead

The women who lead Gensuite come from all walks of life, and have a presence in Customer Services & Development, New Business Development, Corporate and Product Management. Gensuite's Executive Vice President & Customer Development Officer, Natasha Porter, champions women throughout the company. Her dedication and commitment to mentoring women throughout the company has helped establish a strong women's leadership presence at Gensuite.

A Place Where Women Join

The number of women that work at Gensuite continues to rise year over year. Women represent Gensuite across the world: in North America, India, China and Mexico. The company also regularly attends events centered around women, including the NAEM Women's Leadership Conference and the Women in Manufacturing Summit, to join Gensuite with other women in the EHS&S software industry and develop team members across the company.

