

WOMEN'S LEADERSHIP

2017 | CONFERENCE
JUNE 20-22 | PORTLAND, OR

Welcome!

We are proud to share with you this 3rd iteration of NAEM's unique program for women leaders in environment, health and safety, and sustainability (EHS&S) management. From what started as a conversation among a core group of passionate members, we've seen a vibrant community of women leaders emerge and thrive, connecting at our conferences to share their learnings and tackle challenges together.

This year's conference agenda was carefully assembled to address core professional challenges and build leadership skills to help you maximize success and leverage failure. Over the course of the next two days, we'll introduce you to peer leaders who will share key insights from their own careers; we'll share exciting new approaches to honing your leadership skills and we'll create a supportive space for you to discuss topics that are often difficult to tackle, such as how to find or be a mentor, emotional intelligence, work life balance, and accepting feedback.

In addition to offering a structured learning environment, this conference is also designed to help you renew your personal commitment to your career through activities and content focused on the holistic mind-body-spirit connection.

We know that leaving your office and your life to attend a conference is difficult to do in today's busy work environment, so we're honored that you're with us and we're confident that these two days will provide you with new energy, insights and connections to help you advance along your leadership journey.

A special thank you to NAEM Staff Virginia Hoekenga and Caitlin Wilson, as well as and the committee of peer leaders, chaired by Sandy Nessing, who shared their vision and their time to make this conference possible.

Welcome and thank you for being with us!

Sincerely,

Facilitated by: Gretchen Hancock, Leader, EHS Governance; General Electric Co.

Companies are operating and changing at an unprecedented pace to respond to rapidly changing and volatile customer environments. One of the strategies for maintaining flexibility amidst such volatility is to make the organization itself more flexible in how it identifies, staffs, and responds to needs, and to use technology to increase engagement. Organizations that are on the cutting edge of IT and digital work are managed in teams instead of strict hierarchies to drive speed, empowerment, and flexibility into their organizations.

Gretchen Hancock from GE will share their EHS organization's recent experiences with dynamic teaming models, answer your questions about how to build agility into your own teams, and share with you insights about where you can learn more.
